

The international NGO PLAN that promotes child rights works in 65 countries to make real its vision of a world where all the children are able to develop their potencial.

PLAN's kids congratulate Iker Casillas leader of the movement "Stop Child Poverty"

- Children of the 65 countries where the NGO for the children's rights protection PLAN works congratulate the captain of the Spanish national soccer team for his victory in the world cup. In Peru and Mali they remember Iker's visits, who is the leader of the movement "Stop Child Poverty".
- The final game was followed with special interest by the small communities in Patabamba, in Peru, and Sanambele, in Mali. Both are places where Iker has been in 2008 and 2009. In Mali they celebrated the victory of the team with traditional music and dances all night long. Over there lives Bourama, the little kid that the captain sponsors, who said: "My sponsor, Iker, is going to teach me how to play when I grow up and I'll be able do amazing things just like him."
- The movement "Stop Child poverty" is now known by more than 15 000 people all over Spain and has reached other world champions like Rudy Fernandez (Basketball), Fernando Belasteguín and Carolina Navarro (Padel), also the climber Edurne Pasaban and the Korean's national team goalkeeper Lee Won-Jae. The movement has as well attained very well known people such as economists, sports people and cultural people.